The Moscow State Linguistic University of today is a modern humanities university with a long and glorious history behind it. It is a hub of linguistic education, training top-class specialists in the most advanced fields and conducting fundamental and applied research in a whole range of areas.

Our university is known to many people in Russia and abroad as the Maurice Thorez Institute of Foreign Languages. Its alumni can be met in any corner of the world, holding important positions in government, business and international organisations. For instance, 80% of the staff of the Russian Booth (Russian linguistic service) in the UN Headquarters in New York are graduates of our university.

No matter what their specialisation, people with MSLU degrees are competitive in the toughest labour markets. They leave the University not just with the necessary set of skills to qualify as interpreters, translators, language teachers, political analysts or lawyers, but with the boon of at least two foreign languages, mastered to very high standards.

We try to make sure our students do not just excel academically, but develop into real professionals. So, apart from classes, we offer them talks and masterclasses conducted by renowned scholars, writers, politicians, journalists, translators and diplomats, including ambassadors. We open up to our students every opportunity to broaden their educational scope.

And, as we carry out our work, we never forget the duty we owe to more than two hundred years of educational tradition that stretches all the way back to the Imperial Commercial School whose building we have inherited. We have plenty in our past to treasure, and we will have plenty to pass on into the future.

Prof. Irina A. Kraeva

Rector, MSLU

2020: 90 YEARS OF MSLU

1930

The Moscow Institute for Modern Languages is founded by the decree of the People's Commissariat for Education of the Russian Federative Soviet Republic, combining several language schools that had operated in Moscow in the 1920s, such as the Higher Courses of Modern Languages of the Moscow 2nd State University and Higher Courses of Foreign Languages set up by the State Library of Foreign Literature.

1939

The Institute moves into the building of 38, Ostozhenka Street (then – Metrostroyevskaya Street). Between 1808 and 1917, the building had housed the Moscow Imperial Commercial School.

1942

The Faculty of Translators and Interpreters is set up to meet the needs of the front. After the end of WWII, a number of teachers and students of the Institute are sent to work as translators and interpreters at the Nuremberg and Tokyo Trials.

1960

The famous Courses of UN Translators and Interpreters open within the structure of the Institute.

1964

The Institute is named after Maurice Thorez, a renowned French political figure. The Institute wins the distinction of being one of the country's best higher education establishments, and the name of 'The Maurice Thorez', or 'Moscow Inyaz' becomes an internationally recognised brand.

1980

The Maurice Thorez Moscow State Institute of Foreign Languages is decorated with the order of People's Friendship for outstanding achievement in research and in the training of highly skilled specialists.

1990

The Institute becomes the Moscow State Linguistic University. A number of new non-linguistic degrees are instituted.

2000

MSLU becomes the hub institution for the study of languages and cultures of CIS countries.

2007

MSLU re-consecrates the church of St. Mary Magdalene, Equal to the Apostles, first established by the Imperial Commercial School in 1817, and restored by the MSLU administration and the Moscow Municipal Department of Cultural Heritage.

2019

MSLU resumes a relationship with the United Nations Organisation by signing, on June 24th, a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU), under which the two parties will jointly prepare candidates for taking the UN language competitive examinations.

MSLU TODAY IS A MODERN HUMANITIES
UNIVERSITY WITH A LONG HISTORY,
A CENTRE OF LINGUISTIC EDUCATION,
TEACHING STATE-OF-THE-ART EXPERTS
AND CONDUCTING FUNDAMENTAL AND APPLIED RESEARCH.

The Maurice Thorez Institute of Foreign Languages

The Institute was founded in 1930 as the Institute for Modern Languages. Today, the academic structure is an umbrella for four faculties of the University

- The Faculty of English
- The Faculty of German
- The Faculty of French
- The Faculty of Distance Education

The curriculum of the faculties embraces:

- fluency of two foreign languages
- linguistic disciplines, including: Theoretical Grammar, Theoretical Phonetics, Lexicology, History of the Language, Stylistics, General Linguistics
- courses in the Literature, History and Culture of countries where relevant languages are spoken

In 2012, the Faculty of English launched a new profile of training called 'Theory and Practice of Sign Language Interpretation for Intercultural Communication'. Students study oral and written English, and the Russian Sign Language. They then go through several internships with organisations such as the All-Russian Society of the Deaf, the Russian Association of Sign Language Interpreters, the Russian State Special Academy of Arts, etc.

Since 2016, MSLU has been training audio descriptors. Audio description is a way of succinctly naming key visual elements of a film, TV show or play for the benefit of blind and visually impaired people, so that they can enjoy a fuller impression of the media being shown. It is an extremely rare specialisation based on unique education and skills.

In 2014, the University started training teachers of Chinese. The degree programme is a unique opportunity to learn from native Chinese teachers and participate in exchange programmes with some leading universities of China.

The Faculty of English

Besides English, other languages taught at the faculty include Chinese, German, French, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, and the Russian Sign Language. Students who study oral and written English and the Russian Sign Language obtain work experience with organisations such as the All-Russian Society of the Deaf, the Russian Association of Sign Language Interpreters, the Russian State Special Academy of Arts, etc.

Students spend a term on exchange visits with a number of universities in France and Belgium: Université Paris-X, Université Grenoble-Alpes, Université Côte d'Azur and Université Saint-Louis. During their studies in Moscow, students participate in various events organized by the MSLU Francophone Centre: meetings with French students and teachers, lectures, poetry recitals. They can also act, in French, at the Croissant Theatre, repeatedly distinguished for various achievements at the Masques Francophone theatres competition.

The faculty teaches English, German and French, in keeping with the unique ongoing tradition of MSLU's linguistic education. The course is a combination of purely linguistic elements with a broad range of specialized and general disciplines, as well as electives, such as Intercultural Communication for Business and Public Relations, Fundamentals of Management, Linguistic Services in the Hospitality Industry, etc. The teaching is a combination of face-to-face classroom work and distance education, with an emphasis on the student's independent work.

Some of the graduates of the faculty have gone on to become teachers in secondary schools or in Russia's leading universities, among them the Moscow State Linguistic University, the Lomonosov Moscow State University, the Moscow State Institute of International Relations, the Russian State Humanities University, the Russian Peoples' Friendship University, etc. Many graduates are successful translators or interpreters, others have made remarkable careers in radio and television or the diplomatic service.

The Faculty of Translation and Interpreting

Founded in 1942, this is one of the original faculties of the University. The total number of languages taught here today is 28, and is likely to increase in the future.

The faculty maintains partnership relations with 93 universities from Germany, France, Spain, Italy, Portugal, Brazil, Belgium, Denmark, Sweden, Finland, China, Japan, Korea and other countries. Students spend between 3 months and one academic year on exchange at universities in countries where their language of specialization is spoken, and can also take part in Erasmus exchange programmes offered by the Russian Ministry of Science and Higher Education.

The institute developed in 2018 from what was formerly the Faculty of the Humanities. It is fostering a vision of moral and spiritual edification of the young generation, which proceeds from the assumption that young people are best suited to act as intercultural mediators in the modern globalised world, while preserving their Russian cultural identity. The students are involved in exchange programmes with the most advanced research centres of France, Germany and the Netherlands, among them the Sorbonne, Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin, Johannes Gutenberg- Universität Mainz, Radboud Universiteit Nijmegen et al.

The Institute of International Law and Justice

Law has been taught at MSLU since the mid-1990s. The Institute as such evolved in 2018 (between 2016 and 2018 the division worked as the Faculty of Law). Today, the institute offers training not just in legal matters but also in two foreign languages, creating opportunities for our students to thrive in today's competitive global legal market.

The curriculum focuses on International and European Law and national legal systems of individual countries and groups of countries. The linguistic aspect of the degree includes practical courses in two foreign languages and a course of Legal Translation. The facilities include a state-of-the-art crime lab and a moot court equipped and designed to replicate a modern courtroom. The crime lab is used for regular classes with students, for proficiency training of forensic experts, etc. Simulated court proceedings in the moot court are staged not only in Russian, but also in foreign languages.

Teaching Russian as a Foreign Language: Theory and Practice

MSLU has been a major hub of international education since the 1960s. Over this time, the Faculty for International Students, recently renamed the Institute of International Educational Programmes, has graduated more than 2,500 Linguists/ Translators proficient in two foreign languages, from more than 80 countries of the world. Many of the graduates obtained positions in the Foreign Ministries of their respective countries, pursue diplomatic careers, or work in mass media, information agencies, publishing houses, international organizations, tourist companies, or colleges and universities, teaching Russian or other languages.

Every year, during the MSLU's annual Festival of Cultures, current students from Europe, the Americas, Middle East or Asia celebrate the history and culture of their countries by performing ethnic songs and dances or sharing the stories of their national customs.

Centre for Ibero-American Programmes

The MSLU Centre for Ibero-American Programmes was set up in 1991 with the aim of promoting Russian interests in the region. The goals of the Centre include cooperation between universities, promotion of Russia's achievements in scholarship, culture, literature and art, coordination of Ibero-American studies in Russia, improving the language skills of MSLU students through intercultural communication and learning about new research of Ibero-American scholars in the fields of linguistics, international relations and social and political sciences, providing expert opinion and consulting on Latin America issues.

In 2018, the Centre set up a task group on Latin America to better prepare and implement partnership projects between MSLU and research and educational institutes of Latin America.

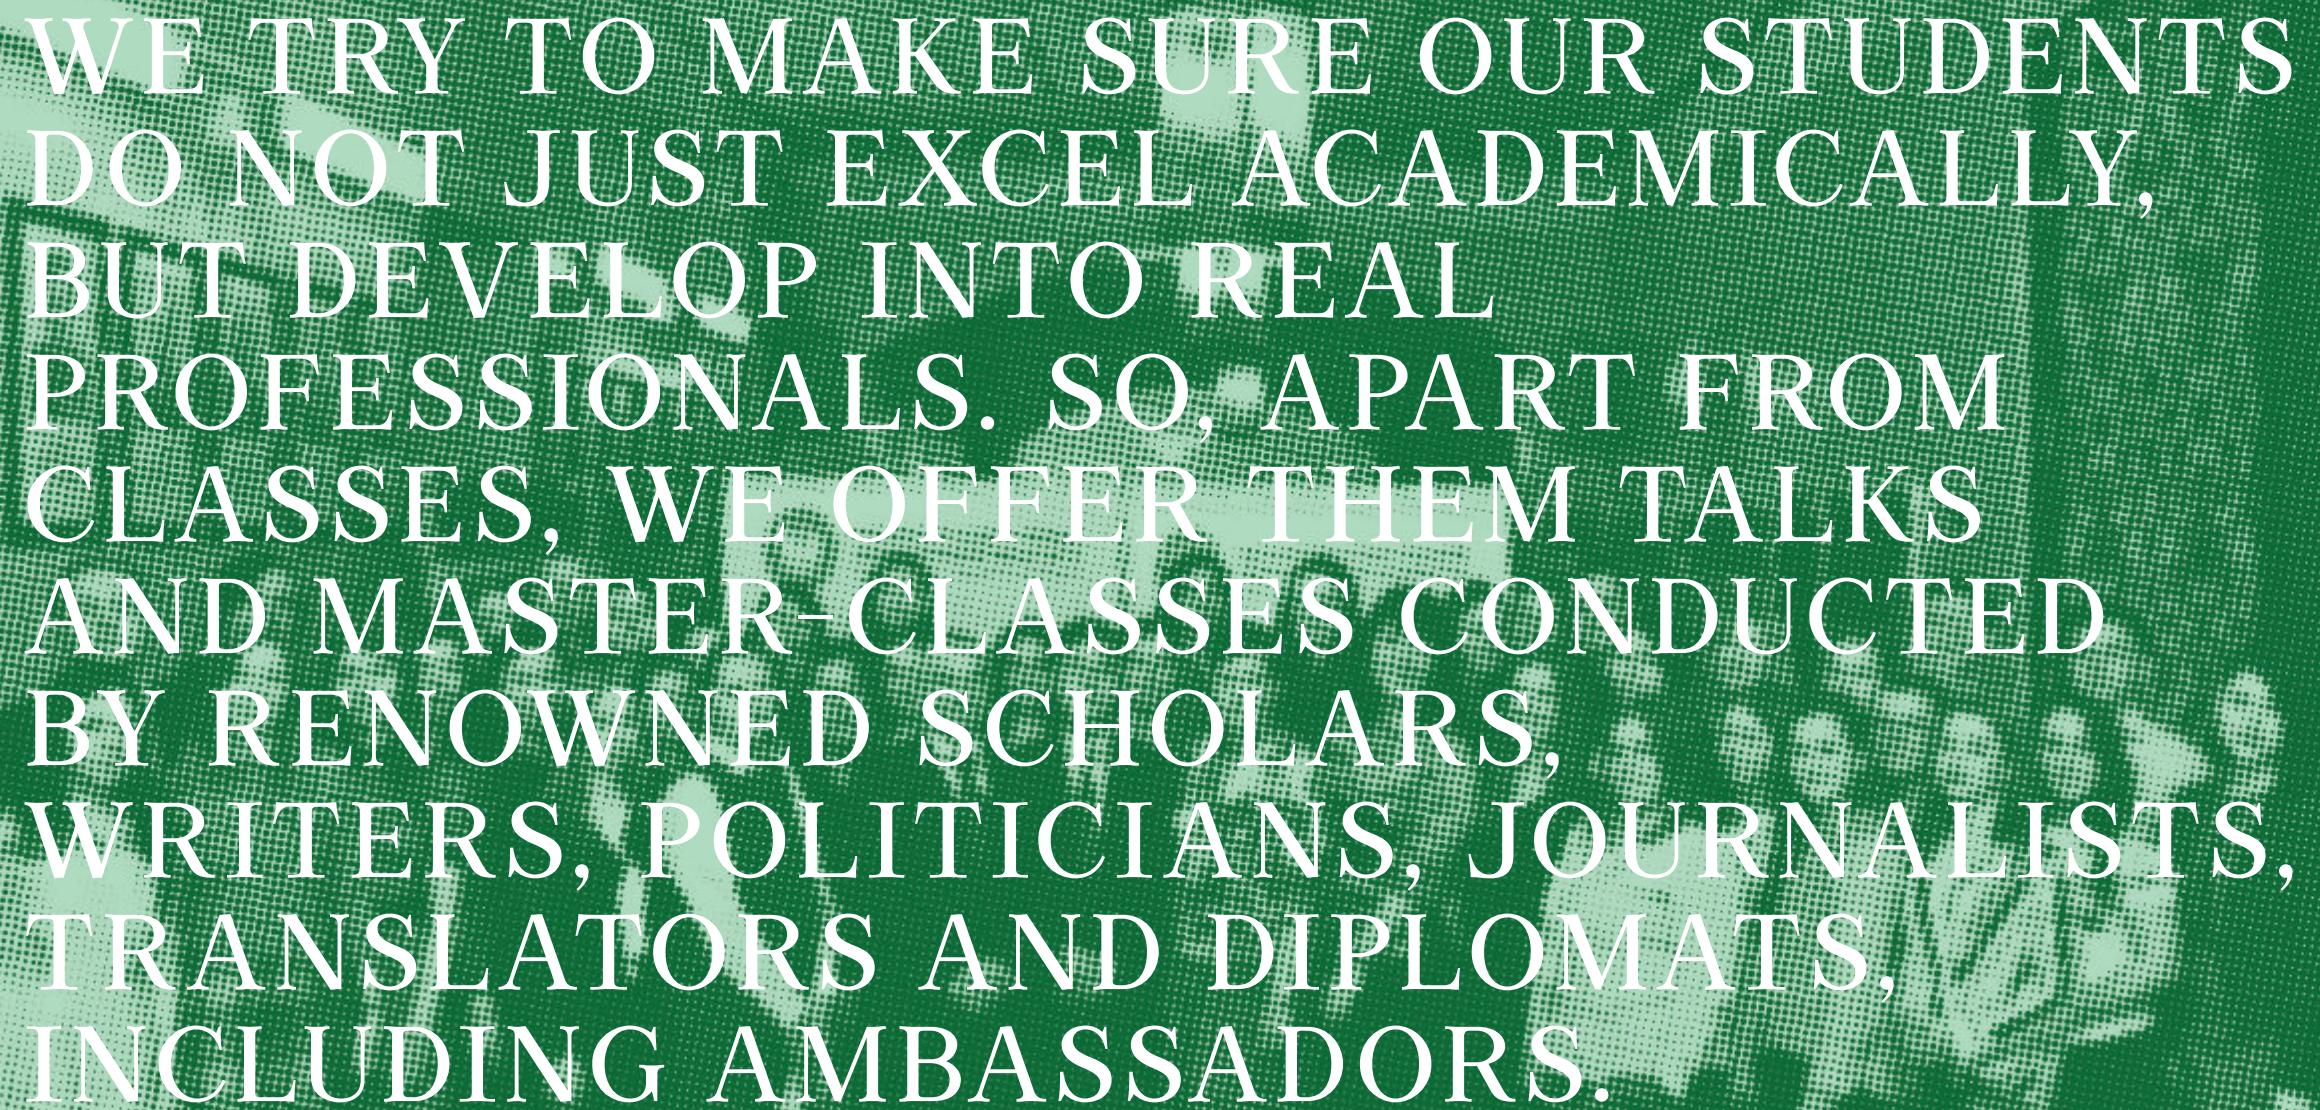

The Confucius Institute

The MSLU Confucius Institute was established on March 31, 2011 in partnership between MSLU and the Beijing University of Foreign Languages (BUFL).

Confucius Institutes (CIs) are set up all over the world on the initiative of the Office for the Promotion of the Chinese Language Council International connected with the government of the People's Republic of China. At present, there are more than 500 CIs in 134 countries.

MSLU is one of the few universities that has a Military Education and Training Centre. The training is related to basic specialisations provided by the University: it prepares highly qualified military translators and interpreters in ten foreign languages. After students complete training in a summer military camp and pass their final examinations, they are assigned the rank of Reserve Lieutenant or Sergeant.

Department of Physical Education

The Department of Physical Education helps students to preserve and improve their health, strengthen their body and the spirit, and develop psychological qualities they will need in their future careers.

The Department promotes a healthy lifestyle, supports professional and amateur sports.
